Mr. Dan Pattir
Press and Information
Embassy of Israel
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Pattir,

I did mean my invitation seriously, and to include your family, if you have one with you. Wear informal clothes, for we live in the country, and bring your swimming suits, for the water in our pool is pure even if I have not yet had time to get all the leaves out.

If you are helping Mr. Teveth with his public relations and appearances, perhaps I can help you, for I've had extensive experience with and in making my own. If he is still here, perhaps I can help him. I've had to do my own, for I've had no publisher help (I've been my own publisher). This is no reflection on Viking, for the man who until recently directed their public relations was quite competent and I presume his successor also is.

And, there are things I know that may interest you.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
